

STRENGTHS & IMPACT

In 2017 the CPLE will continue to support its members to produce high quality research into professional legal education; commence a major research project regarding digital disruption of legal education; launch a third academic journal; launch two new clinics; and develop innovative new programs and short courses in technology and legal practice, global sports law, dispute resolution, and legal education.

The Centre for Professional Legal Education (CPLE) was launched in January 2016. The Centre brings together legal educators, researchers and practitioners from within and beyond Bond Law to collaborate in defining, engaging in and promoting best practice in professional legal education.

The activities of the CPLE include supporting its members to engage in major projects, produce scholarly publications, and apply for funding; publishing academic journals; administering legal clinics; and designing and delivering professional legal training, professional short courses, innovative online programs and continuing professional development.

The CPLE presently has three PhD students engaged in research related to legal education, and there were six books, 18 journal articles and seven book chapters published by members in 2016.

Membership of the CPLE presently includes 30 academic members from within Bond Law and four members from the legal profession.

The CPLE's Founding Advisory Board includes internationally renowned legal education scholars Professor Sally Kift (JCU), Professor Jeff Giddings (Griffith), Professor Caroline Strevens (Portsmouth, UK); and industry member Mr John Cooper (Jones Day).

The CPLE held a one day conference during Research Week in October 2016. The first part of the conference showcased the latest research and professional practice regarding the physical and psychological wellbeing of legal practitioners, law students and legal scholars in 'Zen and the Art of Law'. This was followed by a panel focussing on legal training and education for global practice in 'The Global Legal Professional'. The successful conference concluded with a cocktail event to formally launch the new Centre.
